

took a breath, thought for a moment and then asked if she could get saved. I immediately sent two "flare prayers" to God. First, that He would give me the right Scripture and words to say to Cora, and second, that He would keep Adelyn in the kitchen so she would not be a distraction as I talked with Cora. Not surprisingly, God answered both prayers!

Ten minutes later I watched as my little girl invited Christ into her heart to be her Savior....and her "Boss" - as she calls it. (All this while, God must have put an invisible fence around Adelyn, as she played quietly in the kitchen without interruption - that was a BIG blessing!).

The gospel has a sweet simplicity that even a child can grasp - Praise the Lord!

Adelyn Rhys

As for Adelyn, at two years of age, right now the only thing we're trying to teach her is to keep her temper to herself.

Our family does continually pray for the salvation of Addie. We are anxiously waiting for the day when we can add her testimony as well!

Meet the McPeters

Jonathan

By God's grace I was saved at six years of age. I recall having heard many messages on salvation, Heaven, Hell, and the Rapture leading up to that point and I realized that I needed to trust Jesus Christ as my personal Savior. My mom led me to the Lord in the living room of our home.

At about 15 years of age, the Lord made it clear that he was calling me to preach His Word, and began to cultivate in my heart a love for missions and a desire to serve Him in the preaching ministry, wherever that may lead. Over the course of the next 6 years the Lord allowed me to visit Quebec, England, Wales, and the island of Grenada, but would lay an unmistakable, undeniable, and unshakable love for the people of Wales and a desire to serve the Lord there.

The Lord closed that door in 2000 but never removed the burden from our hearts for that part of the world. Looking, I understand now what I couldn't see at that time--that God was leading us on a necessary "detour" to further prepare us for the work ahead. Now the Lord is leading me and my wife back to that country where we hope to share the glorious Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, presenting the imminent need for His salvation to a people complacent and satisfied in their own heritage and self-righteousness.

Michelle

It wasn't until age 23 that I dealt with the gnawing question, "Why am I here?" I came to the reality that although I knew "religion", I did not know Jesus, as the personal Savior of my soul. It was then, after I realized my utter hopelessness that I accepted His forgiveness and gave my life totally to His work and service.

In 1998 I went on a church mission trip to the island of Grenada. Two significant things happened on that trip. First, the Lord gave me a desire to serve in the work of foreign missions. Secondly, I met the man that would later be my husband and best friend.

I then took a missions trip the country of Wales. I could not deny that unmistakable feeling that I had found God's future work for me. My love for the people of Wales has grown stronger with every passing year. I feel so blessed and excited to be working towards the day when I can begin building a relationship with these dear folks, and begin to share what God has done for them.

Krystal Lynn

Before we began deputation, we held a Wednesday night Bible study in our home. We had a particularly special meeting one evening when Kry explained that we no longer needed to pray for her salvation, because she was saved on that previous Monday. She told me that she had gotten saved during PE class. I asked her if the teacher walked her through the plan of salvation and she said no, that she had invited Christ into her heart while she was waiting in line. She said that she had been thinking a lot of heaven, Jesus dying on the cross, and her sins, and she decided that she needed to get saved right then.

I asked her how she knew what to do. She gave me the "seriously mom" look and assured me that she has been learning about this "for a long time." She knew that she needed to make Jesus the boss of her life and ask Him to forgive her sins." I could tell that she meant what she said, and there was no doubt or apprehension on her part. She had a decision to make, and she made it on October 27, 2008, during PE class. What a joy!

Cora-Gracyn

Even at the age of four, Cora would daily pray that she could "get saved one day." We would continually talk with her, always careful not to "lead her" up to a prayer that she herself was not ready to pray.

Diligently we would go over with her the plan of salvation, and each time she would end on a non-related note (common with the attention span of a four year old!)

However, on the evening of December 5, 2008, her heart was ready. As is common with Cora, during dinner we delved right into religious matters and the questions kept coming more than usual. She
